

BEST PRACTICE- 1

Title of the Practice: Newspaper reading

Objectives of the practice:

1. To keep the students updated with local, national, and international events.
2. To improve student's critical thinking by presenting different perspectives on various topics.
3. To improve the reading skills of students along with encouraging them to participate in everyday reading activities.

The context:

In today's modern age, the practice of reading has disappeared among students due to their increasing addiction to social media and digital devices.

Consequently, their cognitive abilities, particularly in fundamental communication skills, have seen a significant decline. To ensure that students remain well-prepared and up-to-date with global developments, it is crucial to address this issue. As a solution, educational institutions are embracing the practice of 'news reading'. This practice aims to cultivate a reading habit among students while keeping them informed about local, national, and international events. By adopting this approach, colleges seek to counterbalance the impact of digital distractions and equip students with the knowledge and awareness needed to keep pace with the evolving world.

The practice:

1. Each day, a student is selected to read the important headlines from the newspaper in the morning assembly.
2. The students are encouraged to participate in open discussions about the events happening in and around the world.
3. Faculty select and train the students in advance.
